The news of
Black Mountain
Presbyterian Church
February 15-28, 2015

On a beautiful, sunny Sunday morning on February 1, 20 high school youth and six adults gathered on the beach at Isle of Palms, SC for a worship service. After a weekend retreat of initial youth Sunday planning, including small group Bible study, picking the theme (Do not worry - Luke 12:22-31), and applying the theme to our daily lives, the youth led a full worship service. Our worship service took seriously the weekend's work with Jesus' words in Luke 12 and we had deeply moving honest confession, proclamation that involved a powerful youth-led skit, responding that included writing down what we worry over on a seashell and throwing that symbolically into the ocean. Our congregation is blessed with gifted and committed youth advisors and youth who are honest about who they are and their questions for and love of God. What a gift our young people are to this congregation.

Youth Sunday is March 8, we look forward to leading worship.

2015 Easter Garden

This Easter the BMPC Worship and Music Ministry Team is planning to create an Easter Garden in the Narthex. If you wish, select the plant of your choice to be given in honor or in memory of someone you love. The bulbs/plants may be taken home after Easter. The cost is $8.00 per pot. Choices for your plant are hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, or green ferns.

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN

Join the Presbyterian Women for an informative and interesting Bible study taught by Florence Shelor. She will teach the circle presenters and other attendees Lesson 7, "Economy of Grace," from 2 Corinthians 8:1-15. The session will be held in the Library on Tuesday, February 24, 1-2 p.m. The PW Coordinating Team will follow at 2:15 p.m. in CR-1.

Appreciation corner

I would like to send up a sincere "Thank You" to all the wonderful folks who are part of our ministry of hospitality. The friendly ushers at the 11:00 o'clock worship services help make Black Mountain Presbyterian the welcoming, joyful church that it is. People of all ages are serving and I especially appreciate the young families who enjoy doing this. Many thanks to you all! I would welcome new usher volunteers, so anyone interested, please call me at 664-1810 or email bgriffina2@aol.com. This is a good way for newer members to meet fellow members and visitors.

Gratefully,
Barbara Griffin

Communion Serving 101

We would love to have additional ordained folks help serve communion at BMPC. If you are an ordained Deacon, Elder, or Clergy (at BMPC or a previous church) and would like to have a walk-through on serving Communion at BMPC, please join Berry and Lisbet at 10:00 a.m. in the Sanctuary on March 1. We want to make it easy for those serving communion for the first time. Please let Lisbet know if you are interested (669-2725).

Letter from Jordan Kelly, working in Uganda

Our own Jordan Kelly is spending several months in Uganda volunteering for the non-profit Sole Hope. Jordan was supported in part by our Mission Committee. The BMPC high school youth are spending some of this month working with Ken and Kitty Kelly to make shoes out of jeans to send to Sole Hope. Jordan has written on Sole Hope's website, solehope.org:

Words I would use to describe my first two weeks in Uganda: eye-opening, inspiring, fun and most of all hot! When we traveled to Kumuli, a village two and a half hours north of Jinja, to resettle the kids who had been at the Outreach house into their communities, I had no idea that Kayla, our friend Amanda, and I would be the first muzungus (white people) that some of the other children had ever seen before. As we slid out of the big green Sole Hope van, the kids who had congregated to see what was going on quickly looked us up and down and then ran away in many different directions. As I processed this, I began to see how this could be a truly terrifying event for some of these kids. I imagined what it would be like if I was working at home in North Carolina and all of a sudden a blue person with red eyes and purple hair walked into the restaurant. I would be terrified! This experience opened my eyes to see that there are people in the world who look and live so differently from how I do and that all of our lives are meaningful and beautiful. I've been to two jigger-removal clinics and they have definitely been my favorite days in Uganda thus far! To watch the kids dance and play with such joy and then sit bravely and patiently as strangers wash, poke and prod at their feet is a truly inspiring sight. On clinic days I get to see firsthand what an incredible impact Sole Hope and its supporters are having in the Busoga region and I am so grateful. Each day as a Sole Hope intern has been fun thus far because I get to interact with our wonderful Ugandan staff who are always smiling, play with kids and just get to know another culture! And because it's summer in Uganda, every day has been incredibly hot, usually around 90° Fahrenheit – which means we drink a lot of water and passionfruit juice!

Break All The Chains That Bind Us

Chaplain Lynn Michie

Ministry of Hope, Swannanoa Correctional Center for Women

I am a cradle Presbyterian, which means, among other things, that I have placed a high value on decency and order. Over the years of working at the prison, I have come to realize that the phrase "decently and in order" is a polite, churchy way of admitting that we Presbyterians might have some small control issues. I am grateful for the myriad ways my controlling nature has been brought to light, challenged, and downsized so that the Spirit has more room to play.

At a recent Sunday night chapel service, I decided to relinquish my control and invite the women to bring offerings of worship to share in the service. I couldn't quite let go of my habit and tried to provide some order for fear of the chaos that might ensue. But about halfway through the service, it became clear that the Holy Spirit had moved in and made my ministerial theatrics completely irrelevant. I simply sat on the front pew and listened and learned as my sisters came forward one by one to instruct me, and each other, in the faith.

Through our Mission Ministry Team, BMPC supports Habitat for Humanity, Ministry of Hope, and Marion Medical Mission.

One young woman who's been in prison for 10 years described a recent turning point in her life when she heard a pastor read Psalm 23. The phrase she had heard so many times before now reached out and grabbed her: "He restoreth my soul." She said that after a lifetime of abuse and neglect she felt like she had no soul left. But when she heard the psalm read, she suddenly realized "God can restore my soul. I can be healed. Life can be different. I can be happy and free." She then danced to a song by Nicole C. Mullen called "One Touch," based on the gospel story of the woman who dares to touch the hem of Jesus' garment and is healed.

Another woman who has been incarcerated for 6 years talked about the gratitude she feels for her time in prison. She said she has gone from hopeless to hopeful and is now happier than she's ever been in her life.

Women came forward to sing, to share scripture and testimonies, to dance, to offer poems and readings. At one point a song was raised from the back pew and a gifted musician walked to the keyboard and picked out the melody as most of those in the chapel joined in: "There is power in the name of Jesus, there is power in the name of Jesus to break every chain, break every chain." Come Lord Jesus. Break all the chains that bind us.

Thank You BMPC family

Dear BMPC friends,

I have written many notes to many of you, expressing the immense gratitude my sister, Janice, and I feel for your love and support after our mom, Ruby Wheelon, died on September 19. It is my hope that I have not overlooked a single one of you who expressed your love for her. Please know how dear these caring tributes were to us and to our families. We treasure your kindness!

ACTION

Relief and development efforts are the long-term solutions to diseases like Ebola, near-famine in the Sudan, and poverty and violence in Central America. Contact Catholic Relief Services, Church World Service, Lutheran World Relief, or another church agency to find out how you can support these efforts that help people grow more food to feed their families and their communities.
